The High Road Primary Academy of Washington, DC, offers a comprehensive educational program serving students with learning disabilities. In a positive, nurturing, and structured environment that treats each child individually, our dedicated team of specialized educators expertly address the specific needs of the LD student and the related challenges that often accompany learning issues.

We pride ourselves on reaching those children who have not met scholastic and social goals in other academic settings, attributing our success to the personalized academic program we design for each student; to our unique educational model that features one-on-one instruction, a system of engaging rotational tutorials, and highly interactive approaches to learning; and to our strong and steady emphasis on the acquisition and development of core reading and writing skills. Through it all, we implement a school-wide behavioral management system that both reinforces positive performance and promotes self-esteem. Additionally, we offer supplementary support services on-site, as needed, so that all of the special needs of all of our special education students are met.

With our focus never wavering from the academic and social progress of each student in our care, the High Road Primary Academy is the premier alternative educational facility of choice for LD students in our area, equipping them for reentry into the public school system as quickly as possible and instilling in them a newfound sense of personal accountability, growth, and self-confidence.
